FARM DEFENSE CONFERENCES ARE OPENED

Camino Met Tuesday; Speakers Visit Kelsey And Missouri Flat

The message of the federal Department of Agriculture's "Food for Freedom" campaign, which calls for a county, state and national increase in agricultural production, was carried to the Camino Farm Center on Tuesday evening by H. M. Lumsden.

Mr. Lumsden is a member of the county Farming for Defense committee, whose members will visit Missouri Flat on Thursday night and Kelsey on Friday night, continuing the conference schedule.

On Friday night of last week, B. E. Haslam spoke on the program at the Rescue Farm Center.

The specific import of the visits of the Farming for Defense committee to the meetings is to invite the attention of farmers to a survey being carried out throughout the nation as a part of the farm defense program and invite them to call at the committee's offices, which are in connection with the offices of the Agricultural Conservation Association next to the courthouse in Placerville, to fill out a questionnaire on the subject of their plans for increased agricultural production in the coming year.

The results of this survey, in the county, the state and the nation, will indicate the intended increases in agricultural production and the potential total production for the coming season.

El Dorado County has been asked to increase her cattle three per cent, to raise her milk output four per cent, to show a fifteen per cent gain in egg production, a six per cent gain in hogs for slaughter and a twelve per cent gain in number of head.

According to L. R. Enzler, chairman of the county committee in charge, it is intended that every farmer will be given the opportunity to fill out one of the questionnaires before November 15th. Working with Mr. Enzler, Mr. Lumsden and Mr. Haslam as committee members are Ivan Lilley, farm advisor; Edwin F. Smith, forest supervisor; Wayne Phelps, of the Farm Security Administration; and George H. Volz, of the Agricultural Conservation Association.

Mrs. Violet Reaside, of Lotus, has been employed by the committee at the Agricultural Conservation Association to receive the questionnaires and reports of farmers co-operating in the program.

Teachers Meet On October 30

Association Will Elect And Combine Meeting With Annual Institute Session

There will be a meeting of the County Teachers' Association on Thursday, October 30, at the Placerville Grammar School, at 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon, which will also be credited as the local half-day session of the annual teachers' institute.

This is according to notices going out to teachers of the county under date of October 15, and over the signatures of Miss Ursula Hogan, association, and K. W. McCoy, county school superintendent.

It is the first meeting of the teachers association for the year and an election of officers as well as introduction of new teachers in the county this year will be in order.

Dr. Emmeline Banks, of the state health department, will be a speaker and the afternoon program will be arranged to provide time for conferences among the rural teachers with County Nurse Helen A. Byrnes, Rural Supervisor Kathleen Dwyer, Music Supervisor Mildred Wiley, and Superintendent McCoy.

Superintendent McCoy has informed the teachers that they may schedule a minimum school day in order to arrange to attend the meeting, and Miss Hogan states that the meeting will be concluded in time to permit everyone to return home for dinner.

William Dietz was a visitor Wednesday from Blairs district.

More Defense Foods Needed

"More milk, more eggs, more pork" is the food-for-defense appeal being made to American farmers by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Farmers are responding unitedly, the Department says, and are turning huge quantities of feed from the AAA Ever-Normal Granary into energy-giving foods. Milk production is highest on record; egg production is higher than in any year except 1930; extra numbers of brood sows are being held over for fall farrowing. Nevertheless, the Department declares, even additional increases in these products must be made to supply the growing home demand and the emergency needs of Great Britain.

VIRGIN FOREST COVERS THIRD OF AREA OF COUNTY

Stand, At Present Rate Of Cut Which Is Heaviest Ever, Guarantees 60-Year Supply; Operators Promote Conservation Practices

Approximately one-third of the area of El Dorado County is virgin forest, divided about equally between private owners and the government through National Forests, and there is enough virgin timber in the stands at the present rate of cutting to guarantee a virgin timber supply for sixty years.

These are high-lights of a talk before the Placerville Lions on Tuesday by S. A. Black, secretary of the California Forest Protective Association.

Mr. Black's talk, in part, follows: Without going into too much detail on figures and statistics the present forest inventory in the county is about as follows: One-third of the county is virgin forest area about equally divided between private timber owners and the United States National Forests. These virgin forests contain a total timber stand of roughly eight billion board feet, again about equally divided between private and federal ownership. The logged over lands in the county yspport about two billion board feet of timber nearly all of which is privately owned.

Logging operations on National Forest lands provide for the continuous production of timber on those lands, so perhaps the logging methods used on private lands amounting to one sixth of the county area should be considered in some detail in order to arrive at a reasonable conclusion as to the future prospects of the County and the lumber industry.

There are several rather small sawmills in the county. Some of these are cutting in National Forests and some on private land. The total area cut-over by each of these small mills each year is very small, probably not exceeding 250 acres for those cutting as much as five million feet per season. Where uncontrolled fire does not follow the operations of such small mills, their operations have little effect on the future forest growth. Even though such mills do not leave much timber standing on the areas cut over, the areas are so small that they are almost without exception reseeded from adjoining uncut timber.

The larger mills are not so numerous but what they can be considered individually. Let's start with Blair Brothers mill. That mill is on what is called a sustained yield basis, or in other words, cuts no more timber per year than the amount of timber growth in the area that should logically go to that mill. The Forest Service has a working circle set aside to provide the Blair Brothers mill with a permanent supply of timber, including of course, such privately owned timber as is located in that area.

The Sacramento Box Company is cutting National Forest and private timber. I believe it has a minimum cutting diameter limit of eighteen inches. As long as it leaves all trees under that diameter there

Hunter, Out All Night, Found

Sacramento Picked Up By Ranger Along Road Near Uncle Tom's Cabin

Robert Jones, of Sacramento, out all night Monday night in Rubicon Canyon, north of Uncle Tom's, was picked up shortly after noon Tuesday by Ranger Frank McCaslin, of Georgetown district, and returned to his camp.

Jones was walking along the road west of Uncle Tom's when found by the Ranger, who was organizing a search for him.

The Sacramento was a member of a party which headquartered at Murray Camp, about fifteen miles east of Uncle Tom's, and started out before breakfast Monday on a deer hunt.

When night came on, Jones found he could not get back to camp and located a cabin on the McCullough cattle range, where he stayed Monday night, not too comfortably because he had no matches.

Tuesday morning he made a start for camp and ran into some cattle men on the McCullough range, who shared lunch with him and set him right on his directions. Returning to the bottom of the canyon, he located a directional sign toward Uncle Tom's and had just reached the top of the trail and started down the road when Ranger McCaslin found him.

He was about fifteen miles from Murray's Camp and headed in the wrong direction, so McCaslin took him back to his camp.

C. OF C. MEET OCTOBER 23

Session Postponed From Monday To Thursday; Ripley Goes To L. A.

The October meeting of the county Chamber of Commerce, scheduled for the regular third Monday of the month, has been postponed until Thursday evening, October 23. The session will be held, as usual, at Hotel Raffles.

Among the circumstances entering into the postponement is the announcement by Secretary Wallace M. Ripley of his plans to spend the coming Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at Los Angeles, attending the annual convention of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries.

Mr. Ripley will carry to the meeting the results of the recent survey of winter sports facilities and accommodations along U. S. Route 50 and will intend to direct as much attention as is possible to the point that this year for the first time, U. S. Route 50 is an all-year route across the Sierra summit.

Returning from Los Angeles, Mr. Ripley also will attend the meeting of the State Chamber of Commerce at Oakland on October 23 and 24, again emphasizing the winter sports potentialities along U. S. Route 50 before this organization.

"ONE YEAR AFTER" REUNION OF FIVE BABES, MOTHERS HELD ON SUNDAY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Robinson, of Diamond Springs, was the scene of a reunion Sunday of five babies and their mothers.

The reunion came out of friendships which developed between the mothers a year ago, when they were all patients in the same maternity ward, and they agreed to meet a year later with their babies.

There were five birthday cakes. Present were Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Van Slaven and their year-old son, of Davis; Mrs. Donna Beckman and her year-old son, from Auburn; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Feiling, and their year-old daughter, of Sutter Creek; Mrs. Ben Brown and her year-old daughter, of Pleasant Valley; and Mr. and Mrs. Rasmusson and their year-old daughter.

After a happy day, someone suggested that if all are in the vicinity next year, another reunion would be in order, and this was generally agreed.

BOWLERS GIVEN OPPORTUNITY TO SUPPORT COLUMBUS TRIP, GET GAME SCORES

Bowling fans of the county are being offered an opportunity to co-operate in plans to send an El Dorado County team to the national ABC championships at Columbus, O., in the Spring, and at the same time share in the interest in bowling on the local alleys.

By arrangement with the county bowling association and for a limited time only, a percentage of all subscriptions to The Republican written by bowling association members is being refunded to the association to strengthen the "On To Columbus" fund.

This helps to support the national championship project and at the same time gives the bowling subscribers the daily scores in local league play.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bacchi were in town from Lotus Wednesday.

REDS FAIL TO HALT DRIVE-ON MOSCOW

Nazi Offensive Losing Momentum; Total Losses In Men Set At 5 Million

By UNITED PRESS

Adolf Hitler's two weeks old offensive cut farther into the great ring of Moscow's defenses today but with ever-decreasing momentum.

Crack reinforcements from the Soviet Union's far eastern army were reported by London to have bolstered the capital's defenses as the Germans pushed to within fewer than 100 miles on three sides of Moscow after using an estimated 10,000 tanks.

"Moscow is in danger," the Russian army publication Red Star continued to remind the population. "The enemy is at the approaches to the city."

Neither Moscow nor Berlin gave definite positions around Moscow. The Moscow fronts, according to war dispatches from both sides and from London, showed:

West—The German smash 63 miles from the capital, apparently had been brought to a halt for the time being. Berlin's communique repeated that 500,000 prisoners were taken in this sector, bringing the total to 3,000,000 and indicating total Russian casualties of 6,000,000 men. London estimated total Russian losses at 3,000,000 and German losses at 2,000,000 men.

North—The Russians were fighting in the area of Kalinin, 100 miles from Moscow. London believed that the Germans may have taken Rhev, southwest of Kalinin.

Masses of German planes were reported leading the Nazi tank drive on this sector, but the Russians again said their armies had avoided entrapment and inflicted losses on the enemy.

South—The Germans claimed unofficially to have pushed to within about 100 miles of Moscow.

There was general agreement from (Continued on Page Three)

Neutrality Act Vote Thursday

Greer Incident Report Held "Eloquent Demonstration," By Senate Isolationists

WASHINGTON — (UP) — The House Foreign Affairs Committee today approved by voice the administration's bill to arm American merchant ships which leaders plan to bring before the house tomorrow.

The bill is an amendment to the neutrality act repealing section six which prohibits guns on merchantmen. Opponents of the bill are now planning to make their big fight against it in the senate.

Senate Isolationists, who met yesterday to plan the fight, said the Navy Department's report on the attempted torpedoing of the U. S. Destroyer Greer was "ammunition" for their side. The report revealed that a British plane had informed the Greer of the presence of the submarine and dropped four depth bombs near it before the Greer trailed it. The Torpedo attack and the dropping of depth bombs from the Greer followed.

President Roosevelt had cited the incident a sneed of his "shoot-on-sight" orders to the navy and charged that the Greer was the object of an unprovoked attack in broad daylight.

Senate Isolationists said the Navy's report showed that the officers of the submarine might have believed the Greer was responsible for the depth charges dropped by the British plane.

"This should tend to cool off some of the red hot interventionists who have been using the Greer incident as an argument to repeal the neutrality act," Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont., said.

Sen. Gerald P. Nye, R., N. D., said the report was a "rather eloquent demonstration of how in the name of trying to keep out of war the President has chased our navy into war."

George Johnson was a visitor at the courthouse on Wednesday from his home near Coloma.

Love in Disguise

by MARY KEAS

Peggy O'Toole, Irish-American girl, after breaking her engagement to George ("Jimmie") Meredith is badly injured in an accident. The doctors say she may never walk again. Jimmie begs her to renew their engagement, but she thinks his proposal is prompted by pity, so she refuses him. Her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Greer, take her to Paris to see a specialist. One day while in the park in her wheelchair, she strikes up an acquaintance with a handsome young Italian officer — though her companion, Miss Tucker, plainly disapproves. The following evening, she is sitting alone on the little balcony of the Greers' second-floor hotel suite, quietly indulging in a few tears of self-pity, when the young officer appears in the courtyard below and speaks to her.

CHAPTER XXII

PEGGY pulled her wheelchair over until she could look down at the young man over the top of the balustrade. "Hello!" she said, forcing a light tone into her voice. "So it's the Colonel!"

"Signorina!" he protested. "You flatter me—or possibly amuse yourself at my poor expense."

She was at once sorry for her flippancy. She had meant only to hide her dismay at being caught in a moment of self-pity.

"I didn't mean to be rude—" "A pretty girl can never be rude!" he said gallantly.

Before Peggy could reply Miss Tucker appeared. The Englishwoman failed to notice the young man below, and Peggy carefully refrained from calling her attention to him.

"I can't find the scarf," she reported. "Can you remember where you left it?"

"Perhaps I left it downstairs," said Peggy. "Would you be a dear Tucky and go down and see?"

Miss Tucker hesitated. "But—if you are cold perhaps you should come inside."

"Oh, no!" Peggy said quickly. "I'll be all right until you get back."

"Well..." Miss Tucker hesitated a moment longer, then departed.

Something sticky was fluttering from his hand.

"My scarf!" Peggy cried. "Oh, you scamp! Please take it in to Miss Tucker, won't you?"

"But signorina—this scarf deserves to be delivered in person. Surely you can't refuse."

"SIGNORINA!" the young officer called softly. "Look!"

As Peggy hesitated he suddenly pocketed the scarf and to her consternation took hold of the thick vines growing up the wall beside the balcony and started nimbly climbing toward her.

"Oh—you'll hurt yourself!" she protested. "Wait! You mustn't!"

But he had already reached the balustrade and was hoisting himself over it. Then he was standing there, grinning down at her.

"You shouldn't have done that!" she remonstrated but not too severely. "What will Tucky say when she comes back and finds you here!"

"Do you care?" he asked slyly. "Well, no..." she admitted smiling.

They talked on for several minutes, until he happened to glance inside and saw the Englishwoman returning.

"Ah!" he whispered. "Here she comes—she has been quick!" He hastily backed into a shadowed corner.

Miss Tucker stepped out onto the balcony. "I couldn't find—" she began then gave a faint scream as she caught sight of the young man.

"It's all right, Tucky," Peggy said. "This is—Paul Rimini—at your service, signorina!" Paul bowed.

Miss Tucker sniffed, looking at him with undisguised suspicion. Peggy hastened to explain. "The lieutenant found my scarf and was kind enough to return it."

Paul elaborately bowed again as he held the scarf out to the Englishwoman. She fairly snatched it from him and folded it around Peggy.

"Don't you think you had better come in now?" she said pointedly. "It's getting chilly out here."

"Oh, Tucky must!" Peggy appealed. "It's such a heavenly night—"

"The moon—the stars—Paris!" Paul enveloped them all in one reneure. He looked eagerly at Peggy.

"Have you ever seen the heights by moonlight—from the heights of Montmartre?" When she shook her head, "Oh, but you haven't seen Paris until your eyes behold that entrancing—that most glorious—sight!"

"Montmartre!" Miss Tucker snorted. "A fine place for a young girl!"

Paul was looking intently at Peggy. "Why not?" he said softly. He bent closer and whispered. "Let me take you there—now!"

PEGGY turned her head away to hide the tears that had sprung to her eyes. How could she go to Montmartre with him—how could she do gay carefree things like that—when she was bound to this wheelchair?

Paul gently took her chin in his hand and turned her face toward him forcing her to look at him.

"Why do you weep?" he whispered. "My arms are strong."

Then, suddenly he strode inside and picked up a wrap he saw lying on a chair. He returned placed it about Peggy—then lifted her into his arms.

"Oh!" Miss Tucker screamed as he started through the suite toward the outer door. She dashed after him, clutched at him. "Stop! Put her down! What are you doing!"

Paul smiled into Peggy's eyes, on a level with his.

"Tell her it's all right," he pleaded.

Peggy her arm about his neck, gazed at him her eyes now shining.

"It—it's all right, Tucky," she said.

"But—but—where are you going?" Miss Tucker cried scandalized.

Peggy flashed a gay smile at her over Paul's shoulder.

"To see Paris—from Montmartre—in the moonlight!"

By Our Georgetown Correspondent

GEORGETOWN—The annual Pioneer dinner was given by the members of El Dorado Parlor of Native Daughters with the assistance of the Native Sons on Saturday, Oct. 11, at the Fireman's hall on Church Street.

The honored guests were Mrs. Dora Crawford, Edward W. Stanton and Ira D. Cushman, Sr.

The 6:30 p. m. dinner featured creamed chicken, hot biscuits and other appetizing dishes which included salads, cakes and pies.

President Nettie Leonardi extended a cordial greeting to the guests and Mrs. Dora Crawford responded by relating some very interesting facts.

E. W. Stanton, our bashful bachelor pioneer, made only brief remarks. Charles F. Irish responded in behalf of the Native Sons.

At the table with the pioneers were charter members, Irene M. Irish, Elizabeth Irish, Nellie Kelley and Charles F. Irish, and also Mrs. Ira D. Cushman, Sr., and President Nettie Leonardi.

The hall was decorated with gorgeous autumn branches of leaves and the colorful zenias.

The committee, Flossie Francis and Kathleen Flynn, assisted by Alta Douglas, are to be commended for making the affair the success it was.

Mud and snow apparently hindered the Germans somewhat and radio reports told of an intense cold wave sweeping westward from Siberia, where some areas had reported 21 degrees below zero.

The Germans continued to bomb the Moscow area, but dispatches indicated that the Luftwaffe had been concentrating for the most part on the fighting sectors in an effort to blast through the Red army.

In the Ukraine, the Russians admitted the loss of Mariupol, on the edge of the Donets industrial basin, but said that fighting continued. There was no attempt by the Russian press, however, to minimize the great threat to their main Ukraine war production centers.

Fighting continued sporadically on the Leningrad front, with the Russians reporting capture of another important hill top position.

VIRGIN FOREST COVERS THIRD OF AREA OF COUNTY

California Door Company frequently leaves trees of much greater diameter. At the present rate of cutting there is private and National Forest timber enough ahead of this company to provide another fifty years of operation. By that time, in all probability, the second growth timber on lands that have been logged over will produce a volume permitting another cut of the entire area in amounts not much different from those taken during this first cycle.

This statement is far from pure guess work for we now have cases in the state where large companies have been getting their production from lands that were logged some forty to fifty years ago. For a number of years the Diamond Match Company secured its annual cut from lands that had been logged over by its predecessors some fifty or sixty years ago. This second cut within fifty years was possible because in the early days the loggers did not cut the small trees under 18 to 22 inches and the teams of oxen that supplied the motive power did not knock them down or injure them, and of course fortunately those areas were not destroyed by fire.

So we know that under existing logging conditions where all trees almost two feet in diameter or less, are left standing and care in logging is used to see that these trees are not needlessly destroyed while going out the larger trees, we are going to have real commercial growth in this areas now being logged over, provided of course these trees are protected from fire and natural enemies until we want them for the second cutting cycle.

Protection from fire for these second growth forests as well as for the virgin stands has been steadily improving over the last thirty years. This year our forests have more intensive protection from fire than ever before. Our cutover lands receive the same degree of protection as do the old growth timber areas and there is no difference in protection between the publicly owned and privately owned areas. I don't want to leave this subject of protection from fire without calling to your attention, perhaps needlessly, the tremendous improvement in fire control that the State of California Division of Forestry has made in the last ten years. I think that protection service is probably more intensive than is furnished in any other state in the Union. Had such protection been the rule for the last fifty years we would now have as great a volume of second growth timber in this county as we have virgin timber instead of one quarter as much.

Actually insects kill more pine timber each year in these western states than does fire. It is a fact that for much too long a period of years pine beetles killed just about as much timber each year as was cut into lumber in the same pine region. Our public agencies have never done very much to reduce insect losses even though they were greatly in excess of fire losses. There is no appreciable difference in the protection of private and public timber from these pests any more than there is a difference in the protection given publicly owned and privately owned timber from blister rust, although the funds for such work have been largely federal. Last spring California appropriated fifty thousand dollars for blister rust control in the sugar pine area of the state. A few years ago I addressed this club on White Pine Blister Rust so of course you are all informed on the subject and I don't need to repeat the story now.

About twenty years ago Forest Service reports indicated that we were cutting our timber four times as fast as we were growing it, or drain was 400 per cent of growth without counting losses from fire, insects and diseases. Forest Service reports this year show that drain is only 119 per cent of growth with all the losses of fire, insects and diseases included in the drain. Growth would just about equal drain now if we had complete protection of the forests from fire, insects and diseases.

The virgin saw timber still available in the United States is according to the Forest Service, 1,764 billion board feet. The annual lumber cut averages from 1936 to 1940 was just under 25 billion feet. At that rate we still have a seventy year supply of virgin timber. Under existing logging methods and with better protection against fires, insects and diseases we can now have in the United States a forest growth equal to total drain. Long before our virgin timber stands are all cut over we should have a total new growth in excess of even the present day demand for lumber under this national emergency.

California Children Taller
BERKELEY (UP)—Scientists at the University of California were asked to find the explanation for a government report that tests on 147,000 children showed that California boys and girls are taller than children in other states. They finally decided it was the weather.

After hunting the wild animals since the deer season opened most daily one of our townsmen, Wesley Fox, Sr., killed a nice four-point buck Saturday morning weighing 150 pounds or more. Only a few days remain then the 1941 season will close. Thanks to Mr. Fox for a nice piece of the venison, also Joe Hansen.

W. S. Potter of near Gold Hill, and Otto Engdahl of Oakland, who is visiting at the Potter home, killed a two point buck Sunday forenoon near our town and had their tag validated by Judge Rasmussen. The judge also validated the tag for Wesley Fox. This makes over 20 of the animals killed around our town and Coloma so far this year. Next comes the quail season for the hunters and we must say that the birds are very scarce around and vicinity. None to be had at all.

Ralph Le Vitt and wife of the Hangtown Antique Shop in Placerville spent Sunday evening visiting at the Rasmussen home.

The past week we have had light frosts for three or four mornings the first of the season was on Tuesday, Oct. 7—mercury 28 at 6 a. m. which has played sad havoc to the gardens killing the tomato, cucumber and squash vines. ### FUNDS SHORTAGE MAY FORCE CURTAILMENT OF STATE HIGHWAY PROGRAM

SACRAMENTO (UP)—State Highway Engineer C. H. Purcell today told the Assembly interim committee on highways that lack of money may force abandonment of part of rural state highway mileage, adoption of lower construction standards, and postponement of improvements on all but roads with greatest traffic volume.

Purcell cited a recent ruling of the supply priorities and allocations board forbidding the starting of any public or private construction which would use materials essential to national defense or to public health or safety.

He said the effect of the ruling probably will be to curtail or halt secondary road work throughout California.
